This pierced ladle censer is composed of a tan-orange paste with white and micaceous inclusions. The fire core is thick, so the color of the paste is difficult to pinpoint. The bowl fragment has part of the rim, but no pierce holes visible. The fragment is highly fluted, especially on the bottom. The fragment is white slipped. There are some red paint lines still visible on the bowl. The lines are thin and curve slightly. There is no red paint on the handle. The inside of the handle is burned. There is no brush stroking on this fragment.
